Midsummer Quiet More Conspicutous than a Week ago

New York, Aug. 16. Bradstreet's to-morrow will say The midsummer quiet is more conspicuous than a week ago, though less so in industrial than countercial lines. As a rule, leading manufasturing industries are exceptional y busy for this season and the increase in the output of, and demand and prices for iron and steel still continues. Many in the trade were surprised by the very ur favorable cotton crop reports by the gevenment and the price of cotton specific advanced.

densely ignorant on everything pertaining to the hoat. They apparently hope to keep her a sort of "dark horse" until she crosses the starting line in the first listeriational race.

This policy of secrecy on the part of the Valkyrie's roanagers was first made patent when they announced that her permanent mooring place while on this side prior to the races would be inside the horseshoe at Sandy Hook—an anchorage well out of the reach of the New York public. Another instance was had when reporters tried to get some information about the Valkyrio's racing spars, brought over by the Anchor line steamship Furnessia. A watchman, armed with a stick, stood at the entrance to the pier and challenged all persons who sought admission. All newspaper men were excluded as well as everybody else who could not prove that they had some business to transact on the dock. Once past the outer sentinel, the would be visitor to the ship was stopped at the head of the gang plank by two sailors, who beid him up with the demand, "Who do you wish to see sir?" If an officer or one of the crew was asked for, he was brought to the gang way to identify his friend before the stranger was animited to the ship.

The superintendent of the pier and the Furnessia's officers explained that they were acting under strict instructions is said by if Maithand kersey the representative of Lord Duuruven in this country. At Mr kersey's offices in quires were informed that he wis out of town at Newport, it was believed, and they alisy no a spars would not be moved until he returned when under his per sould supervision, they would be taken from the forward deck of the Furnessia where they reposed ill day Wednesday in their thick burlap coverings, and transported, it is said, to the Erie Basin in their thick burlap coverings, and transported, it is said, to the Erie Basin in the rithick burlap towerings, and transported, it is said, to the Him Basin and well in the subtront to the pier and the bulky buildles of burlaps it was learned from a reliable and will

Henderson, of Meadowside, who built the Valkyre. It is a built up must and a new departure in the construction of steel spars. In length it measures 10 feet and its diameter is 22 inches. The steel shell, which is 3-16 of an inch thick, is strengthened on the interior with longitudinal bands riveted through to the surface, which are in turn s'iffened at frequent intervals by a series of metal braces. The exterior of the mast is round sod smooth and galvanized. The steel boom and galvanized the steel boom and gaff are octagonal in form. It is calculated that the mast alone will relieve the Valkyrie of about a ton in weight. As this is the first attempt at using steel spars in a yacht the outcome is awaited with the greatest in terest by experts on both sides of the terest by experts on both sides of the

The engines of the new steamer St. Croix, which have been set up in the shop of the Portland Co., were taken apart on Tuesday afternoon preparatery to their being placed in position in the bost. They were previously examined by a number of the prominent steamboat and business men of the city, who all expressed their admiration for the splendid specimen of marine engineering. The engines of the St. Croix are the largest marine engines that have been constructed in New England and embody the most advanced ideas in triple expansion ergines. They are entirely the product of the Portland Co. The castings were made in their own foundry and all the work from first to last was performed by the company's artisans. It is not too much to claim that it could not be surpassed either in the quality of its material or workmanship by any engree works in the world. The work of psclog the machinery in position in the St. Croix will be pushed forward with expedition, and it is intended that she will be ready for sea on Nov. I. Superintendent Greensmith and Assistant Superintendent Kuven courteously explained the mechanical features of the machines to their visitors.

Monday evening Fairfield business mer: formed a stock company and will at once erect a three story building, 110 feet long with a basement, to be leased for five years to Whittemore and Ireland, now doing business in Dover, for the carrying on of their business of manufacturing apholstered parlor furniture. The firm will remove there as soon as the building is ready for occupancy, and the business will be personally conducted by Mr. Whittemore. Mr. Ireland add family will not remove to that place for a year at least. The reason of the change is said to be on account of the difference in rates of freight of their goods to the principal markets of the world, and the fact that Fairfield is the only place in Eastern Maine at least where the frames to their lounges, etc., are manufactured.

OBITUARY.

The many friends in this city and vicinity will learn with regret of the death of Mr. George S. Mayo, at Chicago, on the lith instant, at the age of fifty-two years. Mr. Mayo was the youngest son of the late Nathan Mayo, Eaq., a leading citizen of Hampden, and his mother was the third daughter of the late Benjamin Swett, of Hampden, and survives him at the age of ninety-one years. Mr. Mayo passed his early life in Hampden, but for the last twenty-five years was a resident of Chicago. He was an active, energetic business man, and for several years was resident manager of the Silver Springs improvement Company, Florida, CI which ex-Gov. J. L. Chamberlain was president. He was universally esteemed and his loss will be felt by a large circle of filends. He leaves a wife, but no children to mourn his loss.

DED A HERO'S DEATH. Thomas Hovenden, the Artist, Killed in Vainly Trying to Save a Hovenden the great painter, known most wide y through the country by his famous Wor d's Fair picture, "Breaking The Word and Work of this month Home Tes," was instantly killed save a lit le girl from death. It was at the Plymouth Meeting station of the little tranch of the Pennsylvania Railroad in.o Plymouth township.

Towerds 530 r. m. Mr. Hovenden reached the station from his beautiful home not far away and was walking up and down waiting for a Philadelphia train. There was a group of women and children on the platform across the tracks. They were Mrs. Pifer, of Morristowa, her two daughters and some friends all from Morristowa, and they were waiting for a freight train to pass so that hey could cross the tracks and go over to Barren Hill. The freight runbled along the west-bound track, and, as soon as the emooyee had passed, little Resit Pifer, nine years old, derted across the tracks towards the platform upon which ar. artist and e id must have died instantly. The women from Norristown gathered about the gory of the little girl. Some, of the men at the station, all of whom know and were proud of the great painter, put it is body on a rude stretcher and carried it back to the house he had left a few thin utes before, in the health and spirits of the prime of manhood. It was all we so quickly that the people who saw could not realize that the great man who has done so much and would have done more and greater, was deal-killed in an act of heroism that was as fruitless as it was sublime.

It was a happy home that Hovenden had in that peaceful, beautiful country at Plymouth Muthay. His wife was an artist of no scall ability. His children inherited the delicacy and artist carries of their parents, and those who visited there envied. Howenden for having realized the ideal.
